

Andrew entered the private security industry in 2010 on completion of an accomplished twenty five year career in the Royal Marines. He served his commercial apprenticeship as a strategic project manager for a large maritime and offshore security company before establishing Port2Port Maritime in 2011. He developed the company to become a leading provider of maritime security services worldwide, culminating his directorship of the company with its successful merger and exit in 2016.

As Chief Operating Officer for Ambrey International, he maintains overarching responsibility for company performance providing the strategic vision for growth within the Gulf of Guinea littoral and wider global security risk management sector.

As the Chairman of the Security in Complex Environments Group (SCEG) he is the interface with its members, supporting the organisation to deliver and maintain industry standards through best practice and partnership with the UK Government to help inform, shape and influence the future of the UK and international security industry both land and maritime.