Andrew Varney, Managing Director Port 2 Port Maritime Security

Andrew completed a twenty five year career in the Royal Marines in 2010 before entering the maritime security industry and quickly progressing through senior project management to directorship. The founding director of Port2Port, he oversees all aspects of business functionality whilst maintaining overarching responsibility for operational capability, business development, continuity and compliance along with customer relations, working closely with clients to understand their needs and provide the optimum solution. He blends extensive military service with considerable industry knowledge to provide overarching governance and the strategic vision for future growth within the maritime sector and wider security risk management industry.
